"Business," was the light response.

"Which, in woman's vocabulary, means pleasure." A quick look showed he was conscious of the evasion, though he did not press the point. "Wish I could return with you, but an appointment forlife. How dusty it is! Give me your handkerchief, Kathe. There's a rude, black smudge dangerously near your eye."

"Business," was the light response.

"Which, in woman's vocabulary, means ginners, under the personal instruction of professionals, are almost completely encircled by netting, but they strike a free ball and can tell whether it is sliced or pulled.
